

Getting started at LJMU

When I was coming to university, I have this full time job and I saved as much money as I possibly could, so I came to university with quite a good sum of money- and what I did was I used that money to pay for my accommodations, which I knew how much I was going to get quoted for that and I paid it in full, because it worked out cheaper.

The week before I left for university was horrible it was just awful, my family were crying, I was crying, my friends were crying it was just horrible, because we are all splitting off and stuff. It got to the very last day and I said that I want my brother to take me to university I didn't want my mum and dad, just because I know they get a little bit over emotional sometimes and that's not good for me then.

I don't think I would have done anything differently apart from maybe; probably wouldn't have squandered my loan last year. That is a good piece of advice for all perspective students, you think your loan arrives and you think ooh, 2,000 in my bank account. No it is there for books, learning and living. I spent it on dresses and shoes don't do that. It is a bad idea.

You just can't come in with an open mind ready to enjoy your studies, and the city because there is a lot to be known.

The thing that I like most about my flat is that I have these gorgeous big windows, that overlook the city.

I like my own privacy, I have got a double room so whenever people come over from home they don't have to get a hotel or anything.
