The Stafford Beer Collection

The Stafford Beer Collection consists of the personal library of Professor Stafford Beer, the founder of management cybernetics who was appointed Honorary Professor of Organisational Transformation at JMU in 1989. An international consultant in the management sciences, employed by governments in over twenty countries and by a number of international agencies, Professor Beer is the author of over two hundred publications and has held a number of academic posts as well as managerial positions at every level. He is also a published poet and has held exhibitions of paintings.

The Stafford Beer Collection consists of almost 2000 books and pamphlets reflecting Professor Beer's wide-ranging interests and the development of his thought. It also includes an archive of Professor Beer's papers together with paintings, models, gramophone records and memorabilia.

This catalogue provides a subject listing of the book collection, which is arranged in broad subject categories according to Professor Beer's specification.

The Collection is currently housed in the Trueman Street Building of Liverpool John Moores University.

Electronic access

Full and up-to-date details of the location and availability of items listed in this catalogue can be obtained via LION, JMU's online catalogue of learning resources, from which this catalogue of the Stafford Beer Collection has been derived.

Please note that although it is possible to search for individual items from the Stafford Beer Collection on LION it is not currently possible to get a separate online listing of the collection as a whole.

Details of individual items may be retrieved using any of the standard LION search options, such as author, title or word; items belonging to the Stafford Beer Collection are indicated as such on LION.

Access to the LION catalogue can be obtained via a direct telnet link or via the World Wide Web.

For a direct telnet link, you should:

`telnet libb.livjm.ac.uk`

and login as lion (in lowercase – this is important) when prompted.

Alternatively, point your web browser to:

<http://www.livjm.ac.uk/lea/>

and follow the "Connect to LION" link, which will launch a telnet session to the JMU catalogue if your browser has the capacity to support telnet connections.

A Personal Reflection on the Nature of the Stafford Beer Collection

I was 15 when I decided I wanted to be a philosopher. But I was still at school, and the official syllabus for me was mathematics. This already placed me in some difficulty, because I was also intent on studying both literature and classics and that put me into three different departments of the school. I could have only one and chose mathematics. That meant studying arithmetic and the theory of numbers, algebra, and geometry, under three different tutors. I still remember the tremendous shock and excitement when I realised that all three of these topics were one and the same. No one had ever suggested to me that they might be intimately related, because they were all separated by their wholly different methodologies. Still less had anyone thought of referring to my other interests as part of a unified educational experience; I simply was not allowed them, and had to operate on my own.

Having got away from all this to go to the university, I set about the study of philosophy. One of the fields of interest was formal logic – both the ancient Aristotelian kind, and the modern mathematical logic of Russell and company. I was well into these studies when I realised that logic, and what I had been calling mathematics, were also one and the same field of inquiry. All this started a conscious process whereby I began to resent the separation of disciplines, and it prepared me for a later career in inter-disciplinary and trans-disciplinary work. But it was not without its resentments on the part of my would be tutors. After all, my excited discoveries were quite offensive to the established order. Quite soon, I was being accused by each specialist block of fraternising with the enemy! These difficulties clouded my early professional life; now, at the age of 70, I am no longer on the defensive. I speak instead of the “Hardening” Faculties in universities, and preach an unmitigated holistic philosophy.

Long before the discoveries of Roger Sperry about left and right brain dominance, I had become aware in myself of different modes of operating. This is why I insisted on painting and writing poetry throughout my scientific career. On a spiritual level, much the same set of discoveries were made over a large number of years. I was launched as an Anglican and, by my teens, was considering a priestly vocation. But studies in Theology led me into the Catholic Church – in which I stayed for 24 years. The experience was rich and rewarding; but I felt as many did that the publication of the Encyclical Humanae Vita under Paul VI squandered the opportunities that had been provided by John XXIII and the Vatican II Council, and I formally left the Church that I had formally joined. That was in 1968; but I had been studying eastern religions in parallel since 1946 when I was in India and had been practising Yoga all those years. The transition that I now made seemed natural enough and, from the holistic point of view, I was no longer seeing dogmatic faiths as relevant to the spiritual experience itself.

The problem with holism as a way of looking at the world is that it is just too easy to talk about the “big system” and to claim that everything must be taken into account. The plain reality is that people may say this but simply do not do it, with the result that all talk of holistic attitudes begins to sound glib – because it is glib. The true holistic experience is of knowing a totality transcendently. But how is that to be communicated? It is experience beyond cognition; it is the experience of cognition itself. We do not prepare ourselves for communicating this kind of knowledge.

Then the whole point of storing such a collection as this begins to emerge. It is far from being a museum. It is possible for students who have the time to discover processes that lie behind the exhibits. Particular concepts and ways of looking at the world may be manifest in books – also in a poem or a painting. The evolution of ideas may be traced back into early papers and even manuscripts, and there are strange machines that were used to explore them. So the hope is that by following the threads through a many faceted life a deeper understanding will be developed.

In the collection, you can observe a letter dated June 1981 in which I state, “I particularly dislike the archive ...” It is not a museum; it is an invitation to enter a process. And why should we wish to engage in the process? Is it to obtain a deeper understanding of Stafford Beer the man? He has scoffed at the hubris of such an idea.

The hope is that by experiencing some element of such a process it might become metabolised into the future. There is a wonderful story about a student who thanked his professor profusely for what he had been taught. He said: “it has been a privilege to stand on the shoulders of giants”. The professor replied: “tell us what you can see”.

The Academy, 1962

Annals of the New York Academy of Sciences , Vol.093, Sept 1962

SB.N.026

BURNS, B.D

The mammalian cerebral cortex/ by S. Delisle Burns

Arnold, 1958

Monographs of The Physiological Society , 005

SB.N.016

CHALAZONITIS, N

Intracellular pO₂ control on excitability and synaptic activability in Aplysia and Helix identifiable giant neurons/ by N. Chalazonitis

The Academy, 1968

Annals of the New York Academy of Sciences , Vol.147, Nov 1968

SB.N.028

DE LA CRUZ, F.F

Minimal brain dysfunction/ editor Felix F. De La Cruz, and others

The Academy, 1973

Annals of the New York Academy of Sciences , Vol.205, Feb 1973

Papers from a conference sponsored by the Academy's Section of Biological and Medical Sciences, the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development and the National Institute of Neurological Diseases and Stroke

SB.N.030

DEUTSCH, S
Models of the nervous system/ by Sid Deutsch
Wiley, 1967
SB.N.007

DRACHMAN, D.B
Trophic functions of the neuron/ editor Daniel B. Drachman
The Academy, 1974
Annals of the New York Academy of Sciences , Vol.228, March 1974
SB.N.031

ECCLES, J.C
The cerebellum as a neuronal machine/ by John C. Eccles,
Masao Ito, Janos Szentagothai
Springer-Verlag, 1967
SB.N.004

ECCLES, J.C
The neurophysiological basis of mind: the principles of neurophysiology: being the Waynflete Lectures, delivered in the College of St. Mary Magdalen, Oxford, in Hilary term,
1952/ by John Carew Eccles
Clarendon Press, 1953
Waynflete Lectures, 1952
SB.N.019

FULTON, J.F
Functional localization in the frontal lobes and cerebellum: being The William Withering
Memorial Lectures, delivered at The Birmingham Medical School, 1948/ by John F. Fulton
Clarendon Press, 1949
Withering, W. Memorial Lectures, 1948
SB.N.014

GIBSON, J.J
The senses considered as perceptual systems/ by James J. Gibson
Allen & Unwin, 1968
